THE ROCKFORD FILES

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

This show is, by our figures, the 4618th private-eye show to appear on the air since we went public as a critic. The producers, in a heroic effort to make The Rockford Files different, have given us a kind of hero sandwich—part hero and part antihero. His name is Jim Rockford, and he is a man who has spent five years in prison. But because the charges were trumped up, he is now home free with a full pardon. The experience has not embittered him, but has made him very fussy: he will take on only cases that have been dropped by the police. He is, we are also told, "not a supersleuth," just "a brilliant investigator." Honestly, that's what the press release said.

In creating their hero sandwich, the producers have thrown in a certain amount of ham on wry. Indeed, James Garner, who plays Rockford, gets to be wry in every episode. Wryness seems to be the hallmark of the TV private eye—perhaps it's because they get beaten up so often and paid so seldom. But the producers don't give us much in the way of regulars—there is only one regular regular, Rockford's father, who is played by Noah Beery. Depending on how you look at it, he's either a bit much or very good at making much out of his bit. The episodes do give us some terrific opening shots. One, for example, gave us a marvelous view of the Riviera. Another—perhaps there were budget problems—gave us a stray dog on a beach.

TV GUIDE DECEMBER 21, 1974

Once upon a time, it was our opinion that Mr. Garner could not act his way out of a paper bag. Either he's gotten better or we've gone soft or Christmas is coming or they're not making paper bags the way they used to. Whatever it is, a lot of what Mr. Garner does in this show is funny. It's not fast funny, mind you—everything Mr. Garner does, including think, is done slowly—but the fact remains that he is, in a kind of instant-replay, double-take way, slow funny. In other words, he grows on you. The Rockford Files also offers two things you can count on in every episode: (1) there will be a girl whom he will woo and who, if she is his client, won't pay up and (2) he will get beaten up. He gets beaten up so often you can see it coming a mile away. The amazing thing is that he doesn't. (We told you he was slow.) He always gets socked in the stomach, too. The trouble evidently dates back to the days of Maverick, when he also used to get hit in the head. But no matter. Don't forget those openings. Our favorite was the one when a girl (Joan Van Ark) asked him if he located missing persons. "Who do you want me to find?" he wanted to know. "Me," she replied. It took him a while, naturally, but in the end he not only found her, but he didn't get paid, too.

Mr. Amory's latest book, "Man Kind? Our Incredible War on Wildlife," has recently been published by Harper & Row.

ERIC LEVIN REPORTS

Crisscross: BONNIE RAITT, the young interpretive blues singer, and her father, actor JOHN RAITT, are swooping past each other both on television and on the highway. Their tour buses crossed in Birmingham, Ala., one day recently as John was arriving to play "Seesaw" and Bonnie was leaving for her next concert date. "I heard about it afterwards," she says, "because I was snoozing." The stars will cross again on TV as Bonnie sings with the PAUL BUTTERFIELD/BETTER DAYS band on a PBS special Dec. 31 and John shows up the next night on CBS in the movie "The Pajama Game," with DORIS DAY. Bonnie comes back Jan. 28, performing on PBS's Soundstage. "The atmosphere was very natural and relaxed," Bonnie says of that show. "I felt as though I were doing a club set" . . . Remember Information Please, the old quiz-show series? Producer RICHARD PACK has acquired the rights to it and is looking for a new moderator and panelists so that he can reincarnate the show next year.

'The Navajo Way'

Life has changed on the reservation since this lawmaker ran a trading post there

By Sen. Barry Goldwater

[On Monday, Dec. 23, NBC presents "The Navajo Way." To supplement your viewing of this news special, we are providing the following background information. See "Sports and Specials" column in the program section for time and channels.—Ed.]

The first American Indians began to migrate to this continent from the northern parts of Asia, probably 10,000 years ago, at a time when the Bering Strait consisted of either a solid land mass or a mass that could be negotiated. Some of these Indians continued on toward the East and settled in the eastern part of the continent. Others, such as the Hopis, wandered down through the western part of what later became the United States, through Mexico, and settled either in Central America or South America. Although we are not at all sure exactly where the Navajos came from, we are reasonably certain that about 1000 years ago they finally settled in the northern part of what is now Arizona.

The Navajos also crossed the Strait. In fact, I have been told a "coming myth" that is interesting. The story goes that as they traveled they came upon a giant who threatened to prevent their further travel, so they slew the giant, who flew into the waters and turned into stone. And across these stones they came to the new land.

The Navajos did not migrate as fast toward the South as others. In fact, the first Spaniards who, in the early 1500s, came into northern Arizona and northern New Mexico, where the Navajos now live, did not mention them at all. There is no question, though, that they were near, probably just a little bit to the north, and in the coming few years moved down to settle near the Carrizo Mountains and Canyon de Chelly.

The Navajo people do not call themselves "Navajo." This is a word whose origins are obscure, although some people think it may be derived from the Spanish word navaja, which means fighting knife, or the Keyah navajo, which refers to agriculture. They call themselves "Dineh," and their language is somewhat related to Apache, as well as the speech of northwest American and Canadian Indians.

The Navajos, or the "Dineh," lived very peacefully among themselves, although they would fight if provoked and were known to raid the Apaches. With their neighbors the Hopis and Zunis, however, there was no trouble. In fact the Navajos had little trouble until the coming of the white man. In the early 1860s, Capt. Kit Carson rounded up about 7000 Navajos and marched them across the desert lands to Bosque Rondo, N.M., where they were to be rehabilitated. Rehabilitation, of course, was impossible. The Indians could not become acclimatized to the new area, nor did they like it one bit. They wanted their homeland. Consequently, one of the great events of Navajo history took place. It is referred to now as "the long walk"—all these Indians walked back to their northern Arizona homeland.

In 1868 a treaty was made with these people, giving them a reservation that comprised most of Canyon de Chelly. Since that time the reservation has been enlarged by Presidential proclamations until today it covers about 16,000,000 acres, mostly in northern Arizona

BACKGROUND

Some Navajo Indians gather to chat outside a building on their Arizona reservation. western New Mexico and southern Utah. On these lands the descendants of the 6000-odd Indians who participated in the long walk have grown to nearly 140,000. Through the years, they have developed some of the most beautiful art and culture to be found among any of our native Indians. The rugs that they weave now bring wonderfully high prices. Likewise, the jewelry that they make is in great demand. (By the way, the Mexicans, when they first came, taught the Navajos how to make trinkets and jewelry out of copper wire, and it was only natural that they would turn to silver, using the Mexican peso, which has always had better silver in it than our American silver coins.)

These are a seminomadic people, not living in towns, but in family groups, wherever the sheep may be. In the wintertime, when it's cold up on the top of the mesas, they move to the bottom of the canyons to find warmth. And in the summer, when it's warm in the bottom of the canyons, they →

move to their summer hogans on top, and the sheep move with them.

The sheep are their major source of income now and have been for many, many years—ever since the Mexicans introduced them—but things are beginning to change. Thanks to a tribal government, very democratically elected, containing some of the wisest people I've ever run into, the Navajos are now becoming interested in living in so-called "white man's" houses and are attempting to move into town groups (or pueblos, as we refer to them) in the Southwest, although they have not yet done it. More and more Navajos are taking over the operation of trading posts formerly run by white people, and more and more Navajos are becoming engaged in businesses that can only result in a replacement of their major income source—sheep—by industry, business, etc. More and more of the young people are attending colleges; but instead of staying in the white-man's country, they return to the homeland to help their families.

For quite a few years, I owned a trading post on the Navajo reservation at the southern base of Navajo Mountain, which is one of their sacred mountains. It is the home of their war god and so fervently do they believe this that trails up the mountain are blocked to prevent the sheep from wandering up. They are a very religious people whose religion is based on mythology and legend, and they believe fervently in these things.

They still depend a lot on the tribal medicine man. However, more and more are learning that the medicine of the white man in some ways is better than that of the medicine man. Their beautiful sand paintings, which we see at state fairs or county fairs or pictured in books, are, in reality, altars. The medicine man will come early in the morning and make a sand painting on the floor of the hogan, or outside, to cure whatever it is that needs being cured. For example, one of their most beautiful sand paintings is that depicting the thunder god. This is sometimes made for a pregnant woman to sit on, so that her child will have no fear of lightning or thunder.

They are very good people. They are kind to each other. They are tolerant of the white man, even though they do not respect him. This lack of respect is not a result of any oppression we've aimed toward them; it's just that they feel superior to other people, and the great dignity with which they walk and conduct their daily lives is evidence of this.

When I ran my trading post, the only gasoline I had was for my own truck, but now every trading post carries gasoline and automobile parts, because the automobile and the truck are rapidly replacing wagons and horses. Communications are improving with the spread of the telephone and the wireless, and people who once depended upon information from the word passed mouth to mouth, now learn of it directly through radio or telephone.

Things are changing on this vast reservation, which contains nearly 25 per cent of all of the Indians living in America, and the changes are for the good. The average annual income, which a few years ago was $600, is moving up. Hygiene is becoming part of their way of life. The diseases they always suffered, those of the eye and the chest, are being wiped out by their acceptance of white man's medicine.

I think this vast desert area will be one of the busiest parts of our country as these capable, tolerant Indians begin to get under their own way. I think the most interesting parts of my life have been the years I've spent with the Indians of my state, particularly the Hopis and the Navajos, as I've been privileged to watch them retain their beautiful culture, their language and their religion. END

That's what they were saying more than 50 years ago, when Kewpie dolls were first being bought as Christmas presents. And it's what Gavin MacLeod of The Mary Tyler Moore Show has been saying ever since his wife Patti gave him his first Kewpie, roughly two years ago. Now, along with an expanding collection of the dimpled dolls, Gavin has accumulated a growing number of Kewpie artifacts—including some original drawings of the Kewpie character by its creator, Rose O'Neill, an artist who first published drawings of Kewpie in 1909. He also owns some Kewpie-painted china and books.

And, if he's like other Kewpie enthusiasts, he's perpetually on the lookout for such prizes as Kewpie-inspired ice-cream molds, inkwells, door knockers and desk calendars. Why Kewpies? "Maybe it's because I've begun to resemble them," he says. Whatever the reason, Gavin admits that it was love at first sight. He and Patti were browsing in an antique shop, she bought him a Kewpie—and one doll led to another. These days, Gavin subscribes to Kewpiesta Kourier, a newsletter about Kewpies, and has even been invited to be the main speaker at a Kewpie—er, konvention. END

Get that Broad Out of the Booth!

Football fans haven't been so angry since 'Heidi' preempted Joe Namath

Jane Chastain interviewing Miami Dolphins' center Jim Langer.

By Rich Podolsky

When Jane Chastain was a 10-year-old tomboy in Smyrna, Ga., her mother received irate phone calls asking, "Please get your daughter out of my tree." Now different people are calling CBS demanding, "Get that broad out of the football booth"—or off the field or off the air. And they're not saying "please" any more.

Not since "Heidi" preempted Joe Namath has anyone made so many football fans mad so fast. And it's all because a woman is trying to tell men about pro football.

When Chastain was in the booth Oct. 13 for the Saints-Broncos game in Denver, more than 700 phoned complaints had been registered before the first quarter was over. "Get that broad off the air," one guy said. "Put her back in the kitchen where she belongs," said another. And the calls kept coming until, by the end of the game, there were more than 1000.

The next Sunday Chastain was in Washington for the Redskins-Giants game, sharing the booth with Pat Summerall and Brent Musburger. Viewers of that telecast also lit up the switchboard with angry calls.

Some complaints were of the male-chauvinist, what-does-a-woman-know-about-football? type. Other callers said Chastain was reading her material, and inaccurate in some of her statements. Whether Chastain is any worse than a young male announcer with little network experience remains to be seen, but she admits that the controversy has put a crimp in her confidence.

"Sure it bothers me," she said. "Inside I'm a marshmallow. I'd like everybody to like me. I really don't know what people want. I think they turn on the set and are expecting to be overwhelmed."

"One man called and said he expected me to do something from a woman's point of view—whatever that is. Well, my point of view is a woman's. Period! If a man makes a slip in the booth, the reaction is, 'Oh, he forgot.' But if a woman says it, it's, 'Oh, she's really dumb'."

Despite the negative fan reaction, CBS appeared to be sticking by her, at least in the beginning. About the Washington telecast, CBS executive producer Bill Fitts would say only, "She was overprepared." But that is her nature.

Chastain got into TV sports a dozen years ago in Atlanta. As a gag, station WAGA-TV named her "Coach Friday" and had her go on camera with her predictions for each weekend's college football games. Chastain took it all very seriously, however. She threw herself into the subject, and before long her funny little predictions were as good as—or better than—many experts'. Some gag.

But preparation isn't everything. In the booth, it's nice to have a little help from your friends. Of the announcers she has worked with, Chastain says Brent Musburger is the most helpful: "He's given me some tidbits of information, and food for thought on how to handle some things." Producers Howard Riefsnyder and Hal Uplinger have also been helpful, she says.

Has anyone been less than helpful? "I felt no hostility at all," she says—but Bernie Rosen, her sports director at WTVJ in Miami, thinks Pat Summerall disliked having Chastain in the broadcasting booth.

"From watching some of the telecast," he said, "I had the distinct feeling that Summerall was not being nice to Jane; that he wasn't happy to have her in the booth. She'd make an observation and he'd keep right on talking, ignoring her."

"It may have seemed that way on the air," Chastain says. "But I can't say—I haven't seen the tapes."

Rosen also thinks Chastain is overworked: "I think CBS is using her too much. You can't work a person like that—down to the bone. Every time I talk to her, she's tired. They had her in L.A., Denver, Chicago, New York and Miami in one week [doing filmed sports segments, making public appearances and meeting with network officials]. They ought to realize that, physically, she can't go on at that pace." [Chastain is 5 feet 3 inches and 95 pounds.]

CBS, of course, would have its own view of the matter, but getting anyone at the network to comment—on that subject, the angry fans or anything else about Jane Chastain—wasn't easy. Repeated calls found CBS executives out to lunch, in meetings, or unwilling to say anything. At one point, Bill Fitts' secretary said that everyone was in a meeting, and asked, "Can you tell me what this is about?" When told, she said, "Oh. No wonder. Nobody wants to talk about Chastain."

When Fitts finally was ready to talk, he said, "Jane frankly did not have one of her better days in the Washington football booth. But I fully intend to put her back on football, and if I don't, it won't be because of that game. That one was like opening on Broadway. She was obviously nervous. But she's not a football announcer—she's a sports reporter. She did our first NBA network game this season. The reaction we're getting would be incredibly worse if we had a less-experienced person.

"We hired her because it's past time [that we had women sportscasters] and we're way behind. Jane was by far the most experienced woman in the business. No, I don't think we're using her too much. We're moving her around as fast as possible. That's the fastest way she's going to learn."

Her football telecasts have already given Chastain a healthy measure of learning—the hard way—but she is determined to see it through.

"In grade school I had three left feet and buck teeth," she said. "My first boy friend wore a Roy Rogers cowboy suit to school everyday. I worked hard to get over that stage and I'll work hard to get over this one. I suppose I have had my doubts. I just hope I can successfully handle the job on a national level. My long-range goal was to work for the network, and now that I do [she has a five-year contract], I realize it's going to be a long haul."

Whether CBS is determined to see it through with her is another matter. She would continue to cover NBA basketball telecasts, a CBS man said in November, and do bowling, plus filmed football interviews.

"Will she go back into the football booth?"

"No, not in the booth again—not this season. We're going to move her along more slowly. Too much negative fan reaction."

For Jane Chastain, it's "wait 'til next year"—at the earliest. END

The Doan Report

NEW HAMPSHIRE EDITION

Antitrust Suits Filed 2nd Time Against Networks

Last month, a Federal judge dismissed the U.S. Justice Department's 1972 antitrust suits against ABC, CBS and NBC—but only on technicalities, and “without prejudice” toward the actual merits of the case. This left the way open for the Justice Department to try again, and it has. Three new suits have been filed, again charging the networks with monopolizing prime-time programming and restraining the production, distribution and sale of programs. The networks responded as they did in 1972, saying the suits are “without merit” and, as CBS put it, “based on information irrelevant to the television industry today.” ABC, harking back to the networks’ original claim that the 1972 suits were part of an Administration vendetta, called the actions “a transparent attempt by the Government to avoid the consequences of its willful refusal to comply with the court’s previous order to produce the Nixon tapes and documents relating to this action.” The suits do not affect news, public-affairs, documentary or sports programs.

Is TV going to be blamed for bringing on the country’s recession? Walter Cronkite thinks so. Appearing on PBS’s media inquiry, Behind the Lines, with his evening news rivals, Harry Reasoner and John Chancellor, Cronkite predicted that “within a few days you’re going to see the first blast . . . primarily at the three of us sitting here, as the causes of the recession—that if we hadn’t talked about it so much . . . nothing would have happened.” Chancellor disagreed. TV can’t ignore bad news, he said (“If it smells, you’ve got to report it”), but he strongly doubted people “are going to say the media invented the recession.” Watergate, he felt, “greatly diminished” the public tendency to want to kill the bad-news messenger. Did Cronkite know of some impending “blast”? He said afterward he did not.

Jackie Gleason will be back in a series next fall, but he won’t leave you laughing. Gleason will star in a miniseries comprising eight two-hour dramas about a character named Panama Farago, a retired ad-agency boss whose friends ask him to help them solve their problems. Also switching from comedy to drama will be Gleason’s producer—Norman Lear (All in the Family, Sanford and Son, etc.). All of the shows will be shot in Miami, near Gleason’s home. A pilot episode will be made in January. The series will probably be on ABC—the network would not confirm the story at press time, but it wouldn’t deny it either.

Quickly: NBC wants Diahann Carroll, who once starred in its Julia comedy series, to portray Josephine Baker, the Parisian legend, in a biographical drama . . . ABC hopes to add black activist the Rev. Jesse Jackson to its roster of AM America commentators . . . NBC is developing an Americanized version of “The Entertainer,” the movie and play in which Laurence Olivier starred. Jack Lemmon will have the two-hour TV title role.

CHEVROLET PRESENTS THREE POPULAR WAYS TO SAVE MONEY.

If you need a new car and you're concerned about prices, go see your Chevy dealer.

He sells some of the most popular cars in America. And, in a couple of categories, the lowest priced cars—based on a recent comparison of Manufacturers' Suggested Retail Prices.

1. Impala, America's lowest-priced popular full-size car.

The most popular car in the country, year after year, is Impala: The Great American Value.

Yet for all its worth, an Impala Sport Coupe or 4-Door Sedan is priced below comparable competitive cars.

We urge you to compare.

Not just the price of Impala, but the value of Impala. Such a roomy, comfortable, quiet-riding car. So completely equipped: V8 engine, automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes—the things that make Impala such a happy car to drive.

And with Chevrolet's new Efficiency System, a '75 Impala, compared to a '74, is bound to save you money down the road—on gasoline, on tune-ups, on oil changes, on grease jobs, on parts and labor.

When you think about Impala's price advantage, plus Impala's value, plus Impala's popularity, plus Impala's down-the-road savings—well, you've got to admit: This car makes plenty of sense for America.

Right, America?

2. Chevelle, America's lowest-priced mid-size car.

All those nice things we just said about Impala pretty much apply to our handsome mid-size line, Chevelle.

Chevelle, like Impala, is the most popular car in its class. And, like Impala, it delivers a whole lot of value.

Yet the 1975 Malibu Six Coupe and Sedan are priced below comparable competitive models.

And, compared to last year, the 1975 Chevelle—which comes complete with the Chevrolet Efficiency System—should bring additional savings on recommended maintenance for as long as you own the car.

(Examples: Spark plugs should last up to 22,500 miles. Oil filters after the first recommended change at 7,500 miles, need replacing only every 15,000 miles.)

Every Chevelle, even the lowest priced Malibu 4-Door Sedan, offers all the traditional Chevelle advantages: Room for six, good comfort, easy to drive, nice styling. When you think about all the good things Chevelle has going for it, does it really make sense to wait?

We agree: Avoid indiscriminate spending. Buy Chevelle.

3. Vega, America's overall EPA 4-cylinder fuel economy champ.

If we've missed you so far, this part is for you.

You prefer not just a small price, but also a small car.

Well, Chevy offers a beauty. It's called the Vega, and a lot of people think it's quite a car.

A 1975 Vega, equipped with the 140-2 engine that's standard in the GT and available in any other Vega, got the best overall gas mileage of any 4-cylinder American car in the published Environmental Protection Agency Tests: 29 mpg highway, 22 mpg city.

Vega offers economy plus. Plus style, comfort, wide choice of models and equipment.

For many people, Vega is a perfect car for today. It's small, but with a nice steady stance. It's a pleasure to drive.

Small size, mid size, full size—your Chevy dealer can offer you attractive prices on some of today's most attractive cars.

Wouldn't it make sense to go see, and have your present car appraised?

You just might discover, America, that you can afford a new car after all.

CHEVROLET

15 YEARS, YOUR NEW CHEVROLET CAN BE A BETTER DEAL THAN EVER.

Waltham, Mass., Catholic parish, for example, there is a "French Church" and an "Italian Church"—in the suburbs the faithful gather under one ethnically ecumenical roof. (Just to take a personal instance, our daughter was the first in my line of Roches for five generations not born in Brooklyn. My wife and I were born in the same Brooklyn hospital, she had the same doctor who later delivered my brother, and our ancestors are buried nearby in Greenwood Cemetery.)

Then there was, I'm convinced, another factor. My generation—those of us who grew up in the shadow of World War I, hit adolescence in the great Depression, and then marched off to World War II—have been curiously reluctant to talk about the past. If we got my father in the right mood when we were kids, he would go on about World War I (he was at sea in first the British and then the United States Navy throughout the hostilities), show us pictures of German prisoners, discuss the mysterious disappearance of the collier Cyclops, and tell us that "Black Jack" Pershing was absolutely right to insist that the American troops go in together as a unit. How many of us have ever talked to our children about the Depression? Or the War? I have a friend whose children learned from me that he held four of the top military decorations—not the kind generals give each other for Christmas, but those that involve getting shot at, and shot. He was embarrassed. We have some Jewish friends who survived Dachau, but whose children learned about Nazi brutality by watching "The Diary of Anne Frank" on TV and, startled, asked their parents if this was really true. They were embarrassed. The result of this reticence is that young Americans have grown up insulated from their own past and, perhaps more significantly, innocent of the fact that there are wolves in the world.

There has been a good deal of talk about "future shock," but what interests me is "past shock." For example, I have been teaching a graduate course on American foreign policy to 35 very talented young men and women. With few exceptions, the first political trauma they recall is the murder of President Kennedy. This is understandable: they were in their early teens in 1963. But what dropped me was that not more than four or five knew that in December 1941 Nazi Germany declared war on us and we reciprocated. They had assumed, I guess, that we had mounted our charger and rushed boldly to liberate Europe from Nazi terror.

At this point the reader may wonder what all this has to do with TV news. The answer is simple: instead of largely confining themselves to horizontal slices—today's news—the networks should undertake serious vertical slices. The current battle in the Democratic Party is, for example, an extremely interesting development if you know the historical background; otherwise nobody understands who is doing what to whom and why. It should be treated in depth, not by a "talking head" (a professor of government giving a lecture) but by a skillful half-hour documentary explaining the intimate relationship between organization and public policy. Obviously such a program should not be timed to compete with Rhoda, but neither should the educational potential of the tube—which is fantastic—be shifted off to "educational TV" (PBS).

To take a concrete case, millions of young Americans (including my daughter and a number of her friends) watched on NBC the superb "The Gathering Storm," featuring Richard Burton as Winston Churchill. They knew little of the background, but they emerged with a new sense of the 1930s, of the rise of Nazism, and an understanding of the problems of a free society faced by ruthless totalitarians. It made my year and I don't care what the TV magnates think: it was NEWS. END

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors Richard Hack and Claudia Kaplan in Los Angeles, Alan Appel and Michael Lipton in New York, and Lawrence Carrington Jr. in Radnor, Pa. For movie choices, see 'This Week's Movies,' by Judith Crist.

Christmas week brings four shows with holiday themes, a one-hour All in the Family, and a smattering of new entries and worthy repeats.

SATURDAY. All in the Family (8 CBS) celebrates its 100th show with an hour-long anthology of film clips dating back to the series' debut in 1971. Particularly interesting—especially in retrospect—are the early scenes of Archie spouting the hostile hodgepodge of prejudice, controversy and conventional wisdom that made this series a television landmark. You can also see how the characters have changed over the years.

SUNDAY. The Wonderful World of Disney (7:30 NBC) offers a witty cartoon from 1963 called The Truth About Mother Goose. Truth? Well, the explanations may be sugarcoated, but the program does take pains to point out that some of the rhymes are based on historical fact.

MONDAY. Fanciful and appropriately nutty verses by Ogden Nash enhance the enchanting melodies of Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker Suite," conducted with verve by Andre Kostelanetz on In Performance at Wolf Trap (8 PBS). Aesop's Fables (8 CBS) is a repeat worth watching for its delightful animation, Bill Cosby's live-action performance as Aesop, and a whimsical script by Earl Hamner (creator of The Waltons). GE Theater's I Heard the Owl Call My Name (8:30 CBS) has scenic photography complemented by the fine acting of Tom Courtenay and Dean Jagger. This poignant repeat follows the emotional growth of a young priest (Courtenay) who is assigned to a remote Canadian Indian community.

TUESDAY. A pair of distinguished old-timers—Arthur Fiedler and Santa Claus—get together on the repeat of Christmas at Pops (8:30 PBS). It's a festive hour, capped by a brisk sing-along performance of traditional carols. On a rerun episode of Police Story (10 NBC), Edward Asner is excellent as a cop who can't cope with the inevitability of retirement. His sensitive performance is set to a sympathetic script that, unfortunately, has an ending that doesn't quite ring true.

CHRISTMAS. The National Theatre of the Deaf and narrator Sir Michael Redgrave bring a special eloquence to a dramatization of Dylan Thomas's poem A Child's Christmas in Wales (3:30 CBS). The actors' pantomime interpretations of small-town life—from memories of snowball fights to descriptions of tippling relatives—provide a worthwhile experience for the whole family. Little House on the Prairie (8 NBC) offers a sentimental yet heartwarming story about the Ingalls' attempts to overcome hard times and lack of funds to make their Christmas a memorable one.

FRIDAY. An unusual sports event—the World Professional Karate Championship—is held on Wide World Special (11:30 ABC). More than a mere demonstration of the martial art, this competition allows entrants to use full body contact, which adds a tense element of physical danger.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and times indicated, which are evening and Eastern.

OBJECTIONS SUSTAINED

I write this letter with mixed emotions. TV GUIDE is to be commended for presenting its forum to a prosecutor in bringing a very real and very serious problem to the attention of the public ['Witness for the Prosecution,' Nov. 30]. Walter Lewis's article was an articulate and accurate statement of the realities facing prosecutors everywhere when they try a case to a jury. Unfortunately, the elongated "postscript" by Richard A. Sprague seemed to be a setup. Mr. Sprague's "Objection!" was nothing more than the expression of a severely bloated ego. . . . As a professional prosecutor who has tried as many cases to a jury . . . as Sprague, I would like to tell you that he doesn't know what he's talking about. . . . Every time "Twelve Angry Men" appears on television, conviction rates plummet, and not even Jack the Ripper on videotape could be successfully prosecuted. . . .

Sheldon M. Willens
Deputy District Attorney
Los Angeles

A small word about the postscript written by Richard A. Sprague, a lawyer characterized as one of the Nation's more "successful prosecutors." He indicates that the problems created by television can be cured very easily by bringing up the problem in voir dire. In some states (and Federal courts), the voir dire is being taken over by the judges. Prosecutors have no chance to make the detailed inquiry that might cure the problem. Additionally, this "successful prosecutor" says that by meeting the problem "head-on" (if prosecutors are allowed to voir dire), we can eliminate prejudice created by television. By implication, he admits that television has created a problem. Unfortunately, the "cure" he advocates for the problem also reveals that he is not one of the most sensitive or analytical lawyers around. Any lawyer worth his salt, be he defense or prosecution, must know that no amount of questioning of a juror on voir dire is going to cure a pre-existing prejudice, particularly one of long standing. His postscript is entitled, "Objection!" I'm afraid his objection has to be overruled.

NO MIDDLEMAN, PLEASE

For the third week in a row I opened my TV GUIDE to find an article (to use the word loosely) by Isaac Asimov ['They Don't Make Monsters Like They Used To,' Nov. 23]. This week he has written about monsters. Before that, it was Benjamin Franklin [Nov. 16] and world hunger [Nov. 9]. I hope that you are not paying him exorbitant amounts to rewrite the encyclopedia—which is precisely what the articles seem to be. Wouldn't it be easier to reprint from the Britannica than to pay a middleman for a rehash?

James Breig
[Replies Asimov: "Actually I used two encyclopedias with words alternately from each. It's very hard to have it make sense."]

NETWORKS LOVE VIOLENCE

After "The Godfather," I'm convinced the networks are run by violence-loving perverts ['And This Is the Deal They Couldn't Refuse,' Nov. 16]. For years they have tried to brainwash the public that it's better to kill 100 people than to look at one naked woman. "The Godfather" proved this.

LET'S LEARN TO LAUGH

"Get Out of Here and Take Your Flies with You" [Nov. 23], is indicative of how far-left bigotry has joined with far-right bigotry in dulling our sense of humor. I wish we could learn to laugh at ourselves again.

This Week's Movies

By Judith Crist

Saturday, ABC      A Dream for Christmas
Saturday, NBC      Geronomo
Sunday, ABC      Star!
Monday, NBC      Scrooge
Tuesday, ABC      Letters from Three Lovers

Tuesday, NBC      The Rangers
Wednesday, ABC      My Darling Daughters' Anniversary
Thursday, CBS      Wild Rovers
Friday, CBS      The Last Run

Seasonally, network-movie programmers seem to have come to the conclusion that this is throwaway time, with more than television-watching on most folks' minds.

You would, in fact, hardly know that this is the Christmas network-movie week were it not for Scrooge. The 1970 Leslie Bricusse musical version of "A Christmas Carol" has a remarkably good performance by Albert Finney to make it rewarding for adults as well as the young. Finney's interpretation of the role is novel: no creaking ancient he, but a relatively young, dirty-handed, droop-mouthed, near-hunched miser, and he also proves himself a nimble song-and-dance man.

Other bonuses include a marvelously slithery ghost of Marley, courtesy of Alec Guinness; Dame Edith Evans, no less, as the rather prim ghost of Christmas Past; and Kenneth More as a gigantic bacchanalian ghost of Christmas Present. Chances are the kids won't care that the songs and dances sound and look the same (and familiar)—except for a rousing "Thank You Very Much" that picks up the pace of Ronald Neame's lagging direction in midstream and gives the second half a lifting undercurrent. And it all winds up so kindly, you can even forgive their putting Scrooge into a Santa suit at finale time.

The week's other new musical, 1968's Star!, is probably the first multi-million-dollar song-and-dancer designed primarily for the 40-plus ladies rather than the kiddies. I dare say too that those with an eye for the haughtiest of couture, a fuzzy memory of what Gertrude Lawrence was like, an ardor for Julie Andrews even when she isn't being Julie Andrews, and a nostalgia for Noel Coward even at his most trivial will also find some rewards in this slow-paced, methodical and laboriously contrived biographical pastiche. The basic problem is that Ms. Lawrence, after all, was not a very good singer and not a very good dancer, but she had a star quality; Ms. Andrews sings and dances very well indeed, but the Andrews star quality does not work in the Lawrence guise.

Neither she nor Daniel Massey, who portrays Noel Coward, can be faulted in performance, but their bright, brittle impersonations of two people who epitomized giddy sophistication during the Depression don't represent too much more in our cynical age of recession, even though Ms. Lawrence's personal life has been sanitized to the point of silliness. There are nice bits of Gershwin, Cole Porter and Kurt Weill, small doses of "Private Lives." But even cut down from its original 174-minute sprawl, it's a long haul for fashion shows, clunking cinematics and plodding detailing of that soapy can-stardom-bring-happiness plot.

The week's third theatrical newcomer is 1971's The Last Run, an old-hat stench-of-death gangster story that George C. Scott manages to bring to life from time to time. A mixture of early Dashiell Hammett and undigested

We like women, but.

Women are great and we're all for them. But that doesn't mean we have to go along with everything they do. Like the way they drink. Pink, red and purple things that taste the way they look.

If you're a man who likes the taste of whiskey, you wouldn't think of adding anything more than water or soda, or a splash of ginger ale. Otherwise you wouldn't be drinking whiskey in the first place.

When a whiskey tastes as good as Carstairs it would be a shame to hide the taste. The plain truth is, it just isn't possible to drink a smoother, better tasting whiskey. And we mean at any price.

These days there isn't much that separates men from women. We can be glad for the clean, fine taste of whiskey like Carstairs.

This Week's Movies

Hemingway, the Alan Sharp screenplay offers Scott as an American who was a getaway driver for gangsters and has been vegetating in Portugal. He makes his last run by driving a young prison escapee and his girl to France. Tony Musante as the young escapee and Trish Van Devere as his girl are completely unremarkable; only Scott and Colleen Dewhurst, in a cameo as a prostitute, bring flesh and blood to the screen. And although Scott proves that he can make trash endurable—why bother?

The two theatrical prime-time repeats are Westerns that manage to make the Old West as silly and dull as it may well have been. 1962's Geronomo offers us Chuck Connors as the Apache leading his warriors into some tame go-rounds with the Cavalry. And 1971's Wild Rovers offers us William Holden and Ryan O'Neal as a couple of pointless cowboys in a pointless tale that will remind you of any number of other Westerns while making no memorable moves of its own.

The week's one new TV-film, unpreviewed, is The Rangers, a previously unaired pilot for the soon-to-be-defunct series Sierra, all about how National Park Service men cope. The quickie-flick repeats are of A Dream for Christmas, a Waltons-like tale of a black minister who tries to keep his family and congregation together in Los Angeles in the '50s. It's a model of restraint and honest emotion, and not just in contrast to My Darling Daughters' Anniversary, wherein papa Robert Young tries to cope with his four sappy married daughters and his own marital plans; and Letters from Three Lovers, a soapy trilogy involving delayed mail (so what's new?) wherein neither actors nor audience profit from what's delivered. Stick to "Scrooge" and have a Merry.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

56 TANGERINE BOWL

Special: The Miami (Ohio) Redskins face the Georgia Bulldogs in the 29th Tangerine Bowl, taped at Orlando, Fla. Aggressive defensive play has been the hallmark of the Miami success story; for the sixth year in a row the Redskins (9-0-1) finished in the top five in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense. All-America MG Brad Cousino is the heart of the unit. Offensively, the Redskins feature two QBs: Sherman Smith, a strong runner, and Steve Sanna, whose long suit is passing. The high-water mark of Georgia's 6-5 campaign was the upset win over Sugar Bowl-bound Florida. Coach Vince Dooley has called the '74 Bulldogs the most explosive team he's ever had. Key players include All-SEC RB Glynn Harrison (958 yards) and QB Matt Robinson, who topped the SEC in passing yardage (1317). Jack Drees and Kyle Rote report. (3 hrs.)

10:30 11 HIGH COST OF HEALING—Report

Special: Diagnosing the rising rate of health-care expenses in America. According to producer-host David Prowitt, hospital costs alone have climbed 730 per cent since 1950. The reasons he cites range from increases in hospital-employee wages and the cost of X-rays and blood tests to "big expensive machines which don't often pay their own way." Health insurance plans, the most common way consumers handle medical costs, are surveyed by Prowitt. But he also looks into innovative solutions like the use of para-professionals to treat patients in community clinics, and machines that enable doctors to diagnose ailments by telephone, thus reducing the need for hospital visits. The quality of medical care in the U.S. is assessed in a panel discussion. (60 min.)

4 8 COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Return: TV's 1974-75 college basketball schedule opens with a big one: the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame vs. the UCLA Bruins at Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles. The Irish (26-3) burst the Bruins' balloon last year, ending the longest winning streak in NCAA history (88 games). Returning are Dwight "Ice Man" Clay (15), who sank the winning basket against UCLA, and Adrian Dantley (44), the team's second-leading scorer last season with an 18.3 average. The Bruins have only one regular coming back from last year's 26-4 campaign, but coach John Wooden isn't worried. "I've always said I'd rather have talent than experience," explains Wooden, "and I believe there's enough talent on this Bruin squad to make it competitive against any opponent." The lone returnee is captain Dave Meyers (34), who is expected to provide the scoring punch along with Richard Washington (31). Dick Enberg and Rod Hundley report. (Live)

4 WORLD AT WAR

A bitter German defeat at the hands of the Russians—the Battle of Stalingrad (August 1942–February 1943). The Germans had been steadily advancing into Russia. A primary target: Stalingrad, a communications and industrial center. Surprised by an energetic Russian defense, the Germans soon had to cope with fighting in the severity of winter. Films re-create the fierce battle—the Russians' refusal to flee; the frozen, starving Germans trying to fight. A dramatic reenactment shows the Russians surrounding and capturing the best of Hitler's troops. The final tally: 250,000 captured, including 2000 officers, 24 generals and Field Marshal Von Paulus.

THE NAVAJO WAY

Special: A study of Navajo Indians adhering to some old ways.

According to producer Robert Northshield, the Navajo way is "their complete involvement with tradition." To get at the heart of this tradition, Northshield filmed a community on a Utah reservation, focusing on an old medicine man who still practices ancient rituals to cure tribesmen.

Footage (being edited at press time) shows several of the healing ceremonies, which often last for days and involve elaborate chants and sand paintings that are believed to drive evil away.

Northshield also reports on the Navajos' matrilineal society and explores their bond with the land. "Every rock, every valley, every mountain is entered in the [Navajos' creation] myth, linked to their feeling of belonging in the place and why they're here."

For Navajo history, see the article by Sen. Barry Goldwater on page 4. (60 min.)

On the Go with David Hartman

By Edwin Kiester Jr.

David Hartman is threading the white Buick Riviera through the Sunday traffic near Malibu, Cal., and he is talking a mile a minute and changing the subject almost as fast as he is changing lanes. We have already covered his opinions on the spunkiness of independence of baseball star Dick Allen, how he became fascinated with the science of neonatology, why he gave up steer-ropeing and how he happened to be arrested once in Buzzards Bay, Mass. Now he has taken up the topic of teachers and teaching, the theme of his new NBC series, Lucas Tanner, and the conversation goes like this:

"I think every one has had one teacher who turned him around and changed his life in some way. I know I did. Two, in fact. . . . Now we're getting out toward the Malibu—quotes—colony where all the—quotes—stars live. Gorgeous out here. . . . It's not so much what those teachers taught you as what you learned from them, if you see what I mean about the difference. I like to say about Tanner, 'He teaches life more than he teaches English.' . . . Look at that dog! My wife and I just bought an Irish setter puppy. We've both just been crazy about Irish setters all our lives, and so now we're going to start into that whole shlock of the training, and the yelping at night, and the chewing things up. . . . The other day I made a comment inadvertently, and someone asked, 'Do you realize what you just said?' What I said was, 'Lucas Tanner is about people maturing—both young people and adults.' It's not a classroom show, it's a show about people and their options. . . . Why don't we stop and have a drink and talk? How about there? 'No bare feet, no bathing suits'—that changes the quality slightly. No, that's the place—the Nantucket! That'll take us back to New England! Wouldn't it be sensational to live on the coast? Now if I can just get us there without getting killed."

And with that he whips the Buick across six lanes of traffic and into the restaurant parking lot.

If this sounds as if David Hartman is distracted, reckless or garrulous, nothing could be further from the truth. Rather it shows that he is a man of many parts, by no means all of them on television, and that he is knowledgeable, enthusiastic and articulate about each. Since he doffed his surgical gown and left The Bold Ones, he has (1) starred in a Walt Disney Productions fantasy, "The Island at the Top of the World"; (2) produced an ABC medical documentary, "Birth and Babies," featuring, on network television, an actual childbirth; (3) engaged in spring training with the San Francisco Giants; (4) narrated Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" in an outdoor concert with the St. Louis Symphony; (5) married TV producer Maureen Downey; and (6) bought that setter. Each of these, he says characteristically, was "tremendous fun."

But the main focus of the interest has been Tanner, a series that, in the words of executive producer David Victor, was "carefully and deliberately designed for David Hartman" and for which the network, Universal TV and the star still have high hopes, even though low ratings put the series in danger of cancellation shortly after it got underway. Hartman plays the role of a former baseball pitcher turned sportswriter who comes back to his home town to teach high-school English and coach baseball after the auto-crash death of his wife and son. The show is set in the fictional Harry S Truman Memorial High School in the very real St. Louis suburb of Webster Groves, Mo. It is the reason he has agreed to give up a Sunday with his new bride to sit at the beach and talk about teaching.

"I think the role of the teacher is to get a young person excited about himself and something he can do," he says, picking up the thread of the conversation after ordering a vodka-and-tonic. "You've got to give the kid the enthusiasm to attack life, to dive in and try things, even if he blows it."

"Tanner, for instance, has been immensely successful, and then he's failed, but he's still trying, and he's not afraid to do things his way. His attitudes make him an example for kids to follow. He's part of the establishment, but at the same time he's a maverick."

"The response from teachers I've talked to is that he's not at all freaky. There are loads of people like him, trying to help kids with their lives. It's constantly frustrating for them, because they don't always have the time or the tools, but it can be tremendously exciting when they really touch someone's life. . . . God, look at those waves! The sound of the ocean! Isn't it sensational?"

If the past is a criterion, the education fraternity can soon expect to hear the resonant Hartman baritone expounding those sentiments at professional meetings. Hartman is a believer in steeping himself in the role he is about to play. For The Bold Ones, he haunted hospitals and clinics, "doing research" into how doctors talked, thought and performed, and became such a familiar figure in the medical profession that he was invited to address, by his count, 30 to 40 medical meetings, including that of the august American Medical Association, on the role of TV drama in teaching the public about health.

Oddly, according to Hartman, he never intended to go into show business—just business. One of three sons of a Methodist minister turned advertising executive, he led a freewheeling childhood in Pelham, N.Y., where his parents set the pattern for his later life by encouraging him to try anything that interested him, and he skipped from poetry to baseball to seeing Broadway musicals. He went to prep school in Massachusetts and then earned an economics degree at Duke, after which he spent three years in the Air Force. Just prior to discharge, he says, he was weighing 30 job offers when the wives of Dow Air Force Base in Maine scheduled an amateur production of "Oklahoma!" and asked him to play Curly. At first he demurred, but a buddy, Manny Ferris, threw his "try-anything" philosophy back at him.

"I said, 'Come on, you love music and you love shows, and you might never have another chance,' recalls Ferris, now a vice president of Sheraton Corporation of America, "and I added, 'I thought you were always the one who said, 'Well, why not try?'" So Hartman performed for four weekends, and then Ferris suggested that they visit New York and explore the possibilities of a stage career. They auditioned at the American Academy of Dramatic Art, returned to Maine, and had a long talk in which, Hartman laughs now, "I decided I'd give it a couple of years just for fun, and Manny—the dog—concluded he wasn't cut out for the stage at all and went into business."

Hartman attended the Academy for two years, then became a musical performer. He toured with the Harry Belafonte Singers and in the national company of "My Fair Lady," appeared off-Broadway with Liza Minnelli in "Best Foot Forward" and on Broadway with, Carol Channing in "Hello, Dolly!" In 1966, he was touring in summer stock in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" when he was asked to do a telephone commercial in which he appeared as a cowboy on horseback, plugging the Denver area code. The 14-second bit was seen by a Universal producer and led first to a role in a made-for-TV film, "I Love a Mystery," then to a season in The Virginian, and finally to the role in The Bold Ones.

One would think that four years of practicing internal medicine Sunday nights would be a full-time occupation, but it left Hartman eager for other things to do. One idea was to produce a medical show of his own, resulting in "Birth and Babies." "I had a lot of offers to narrate medical documentaries, but I always said I wanted to pick my own topic. Finally ABC said, 'Well, just what would you like to do?' And I said, 'You know, one of the biggest problems today is the number of birth-defect babies born—a quarter of a million a year. Yet it's sad but true that a lot of those could be prevented just by good prenatal care. So I'd like to follow a couple around and just show how they can go about ensuring a healthy baby.' They agreed, and we just depicted the whole thing, right through labor up to the actual delivery, and it was really exciting. You know we're so preoccupied with violence on television, and yet the single most exciting positive experience of humanity, the beginning of a life, is something that network television viewers aren't exposed to."

Side by side with his acting career, Hartman was keeping busy in athletic pursuits. On The Virginian, he had learned to ride and rope, and for a time spent every Saturday at a San Fernando Valley ranch where city boys could pay to play cowpoke for the day; he quit when he almost lost a finger between a rapidly tightening lariat and a saddle horn. So he took up golf, and became good enough to shoot in the mid 80s and team with Lionel Hebert to win the pro-am trophy in the Doral Open. Next, he tried tennis, on the theory that the benefits were greater for the time expended. With James Franciscus, he won a celebrity doubles tournament, beating Charlton Heston and Dan Rowan. Still dissatisfied with the amount of exercise, he persuaded Giants' owner Horace Stoneham to let him participate in spring training. Annually he spent three to five weeks in Arizona, getting into condition like any rookie. Steve Stone, a former Giant →

White rum. For a traditional eggnog.

Eggnog

Beat 12 egg yolks until light; beat in  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. sugar til mixture is thick. Stir in 1 qt. milk and a "fifth" of white rum from Puerto Rico (or gold rum if you're a strict traditionalist). Chill 3 hrs., pour into punch bowl. Fold in 1 qt. heavy cream, stiffly whipped. Chill 1 hr., dust with nutmeg. (Serves 24.)

More ways tradition and white rum come together:

Daiquiri

Juice of half a lime ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.);  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. simple syrup (or scant tsp. sugar);  $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz. white rum from Puerto Rico. Shake with ice; strain into cocktail glass.

Holiday Punch

Into a large pitcher over a block of ice or ice cubes, pour 8 oz. orange juice, 8 oz. unsweetened pineapple juice, 8 oz. club soda,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz. lime juice, 8 oz. white rum from Puerto Rico, sweeten to taste. Serves 6.

Or an untraditional martini.

Martini

Combine 1 part dry vermouth with 5 parts white rum. (White rum aged in Puerto Rico is just as clear and even smoother than the gin or vodka usually associated with the martini.) Stir with ice and pour. Add olive. Then enjoy the smoothest martini you ever tasted.

More ways to part from tradition with white rum:

Gimlet

Mix 4 or 5 parts white rum from Puerto Rico with 1 part Rose's Lime Juice and serve on the rocks. You'll wonder why you ever made a gimlet any other way.

Screwdriver

In a highball glass with ice cubes, pour  $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz. white rum from Puerto Rico. Fill glass with orange juice.

pitcher now with the Chicago Cubs, recalls that Hartman, a first baseman at Duke, "had a pretty good arm. Last time I saw him he had learned to throw a slider, and he was as proud as if he had won an Emmy award."

Meanwhile, NBC was looking for a vehicle for Hartman, and wanted a school format. The network went to Victor, the creator of Dr. Kildare, Marcus Welby, M.D. and Owen Marshall. "I was eager to do a show with him because he's a great TV star," says Victor. "You know, the great ones are the good reactors, the ones with good faces and good eyes, the Richard Chamberlains, Robert Youngs, Raymond Burrs, who can dominate the small screen. David is like that." Victor brought in Jerry McNeely, author of many Kildare episodes, and the latter, a teacher all his life, worked up the idea for the pilot: "A school seemed a natural setting for his kind of warmth and offbeat appeal—I couldn't see him as a detective, for instance."

Victor, who is proud of his awards for public service from medical groups, also saw a chance to do something constructive, he says. "There's an obvious need to improve secondary education," he declares. "It's been untouched for 60 years. They still read 'The Mill on the Floss,' and a lot of what's done has no relationship to students' lives. Unless we can get young people excited, we're failing them, and they'll turn away to other things, or drop out. We hope we can inspire the good teachers, of which there are many, to try new things and get more involved with students' lives."

According to Victor, the show explores themes "that were old at the time of Booth Tarkington," but within the framework of 1974 morality and values. Among them are a teacher-student infatuation, the adjustment problems of a young prodigy, and the difficult choice of a boy who must decide between a major-league baseball contract and a college education.

Hartman is trying to make Tanner both serious and humorous. "If you're trying to say things about human relationships, I think you can make important points more successfully in a light way. Like The Mary Tyler Moore Show—they say some really heavy things, but they do it with humor. I think that's brilliant."

While we sat there, a girl of perhaps 19 came up and stood by the table and giggled. "We were trying to guess who you were, and I was the one who said, 'It's David Hartman!'"

He smiled. "That shows you're a smart girl. What's the insignia?"—pointing to a badge she wore.

"It's a motorcycle club," she replied. "My boy friend and I came out here on motorcycles."

Hartman leaned back in his chair and frowned. "Three of my very good friends have been killed or very badly injured in the last few months on motorcycles," he said. "You're out there in traffic, you're totally unprotected, and through someone else's error you could get wiped out and nothing would happen to them. I have a friend who's a stunt rider and he says he'd never ride a bike in traffic."

The frown disappeared, and the eyes crinkled. "Now, dirt-biking, that's something else. I might try that myself."

With that, he stood up, shook hands with the girl, and we headed back toward Hollywood. En route we talked about Nathanael West's novel "The Day of the Locust," which he had just re-read; his wish to do more producing ("but not if I get involved in this big-business thing, instead of just being a creative person"); why he had never played in a movie or TV musical ("I didn't want to get typed, but now I'd like to do 'Kismet' or 'Music Man'"); the name he and Maureen had chosen for their first daughter (Bridget); and his work for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

THE BIG PICTURE

There's a company in Boston that sells television sets for $2800. For that price, you get a seven-foot diagonal screen, and probably a lot of curious neighbors for company. A look at a TV set that isn't for everybody.

It's 8 P.M. at Preview House, off the Sunset Strip. Inside, 400 persons, culled by invitation from local shopping centers and by telephone, are watching a pilot for one of the fall's possible new series. It stars Karen Valentine, playing a Portland girl in the final stages of divorce.

Each of these 400 viewers holds a dial with five markings, reading Very Good, Good, Fair, Dull and Very Dull. If the viewer likes what he sees on the screen, up goes the dial to Very Good. If he doesn't, down it comes—possibly to Very Dull. As the dials are turned, these audience reactions are being fed into a giant computer at the back of the theater.

Upstairs, unseen by the audience, network and studio executives are anxiously waiting to see how that computer curve develops. Within minutes, the machine will feed out a number: an average of the audience's composite reaction to the show. How high that number is will be important in determining whether the pilot is to be signed as a new series.

In the case of "The Karen Valentine Program," the curve slowly begins to slip. The network executives nod apprehensively: the audience is not responding as hoped for. The final computer number is a low 62. The questionnaire results, filled out afterward by the audience, are largely negative, though they affirm the star's popularity. Weeks later, ABC rejects the show.

For the record, ABC executives explain that the series wasn't picked up because the pilot hadn't fulfilled what they had in mind for Karen Valentine. But David Davis, who co-produced the pilot, thinks he knows why the network didn't buy it. "I am a victim of the tests," says he. "If we had tested high, we'd be on the air." Everyone → knows how avidly network research departments reach for the weekly Nielsen rating charts. Less well-known is this other aspect of network research—program testing; that is, the testing of pilots for new series. With few exceptions, before any pilot is bought as a series, it must first win the audience's seal of approval in such testing.

And, having wiggled, helps decide whether a show will reach your screen

Understandably, producers and writers hate the whole business.

In Hollywood, the very mention of network research is sure to provoke a strong reaction. With obvious restraint, most producers frown and mutter darkly at its name. When the conversation turns to network research, Jim Brooks, the bearded young co-creator/executive producer of The Mary Tyler Moore Show and others, leaps up and angrily paces his office floor. "You're not going to find anybody who says it's terrific," he says bitterly. "I find there is nothing testing can tell you that you couldn't tell yourself looking at a film."

Another opponent of the testing system, producer Norman Lear, says, "For my part, and the part of every producer and director in this town, we would sign a paper tomorrow to do away with those research [departments]. Research is trivial and useless and doesn't function as well as simple human instinct and good taste."

Much of the testing is done at Preview House, which is run by ASI Market Research, Inc. ABC and NBC use it. Before each screening, ASI, seeking audiences that are fairly representative of the mass American viewing public, shows the group a seven-minute Mr. Magoo cartoon—"Magoo Goes Skiing." If an audience responds either too critically or too enthusiastically to the cartoon, the results of that test are adjusted accordingly.

Across the continent, CBS, interestingly, doesn't bother going after carefully picked sample audiences. The network invites its audiences in right off the streets of midtown Manhattan. The practice "is not very scientific," acknowledges Arnold Becker, CBS's assistant director of television network research. "[For] people tend to think that blacks and diverse groups have diverse tastes. In fact, there is a great deal of similarity. Everybody watches everything. The notion that poor blacks like different types of entertainment—that's just not true. People like the same kinds of programs."

It is this attitude that so upsets TV producers. Opposition to program-testing is based on two arguments:

Argument No. 1. Shows can be made to produce high test scores. "You can cut for ASI, to make sure you build an audience reaction," says Andrew Siegel, ABC's director of comedy programs. "Some producers will have chase scenes and cop scenes and dinosaurs coming out of the walls, and the needle goes up very high."

Argument No. 2. The use of test results in making programming decisions is simply not valid. Reliance on the numbers means that honest programs, which require slow acclimatizing by the audience, won't have time to prove themselves. "The really breakthrough shows will not test well because breakthrough shows require change," agrees Marvin Antonowsky, NBC's vice president of program administration.

In the eyes of Hollywood producers there is one thing even more insidious than program-testing: concept-testing. Concept-testing means handing out one-paragraph descriptions of possible series to a sampling of viewers for their opinions. The reaction this practice provokes in Hollywood can be alarming even in normally quiet, gentle men.

Roy Huggins, executive supervisor of the pilot for The Rockford Files, joins the dissent. He had just finished writing a TV-movie, "The Case Against McCreed," about the Un-American Activities Committee, only to see it re- → jected by ABC after poor concept-testing. "Naturally it concept-tested poorly," says he with some asperity. "It's like being asked to say what a cake will be like by tasting the dough."

Still, every once in a while some producers are willing to use testing. Columbo's producers wanted to know if viewers were getting tired of Peter Falk's trench coat this year. (The answer was no.) The producers of Adam-12 wondered if they should be showing more of the personal life of their police officers. (Answer: No, people tune in to watch the characters perform as policemen.) Research is often used in selecting a title for a series. NBC changed the title of "In Tandem" to Movin' On. Research had showed that viewers were more likely to turn to the latter title.

The executive producer of Apple's Way, Lee Rich, remembers that CBS research helped him determine in the early episodes of the show that "Apple was bigger than life, that the show needed more realism, that the people were plastic. It told me what I already knew. It's a wonderful feeling to be confirmed."

On the other hand, executive producer Quinn Martin recalls that during testing, CBS research got nervous about the way William Conrad, when under pressure in Cannon, chewed peppermint sticks. Network analysts thought it made him seem inadequate. Cannon stopped chewing peppermint sticks. "Now Kojak sucks lollipops and no one minds," says Martin with amusement.

Research got the jitters again when Good Times went on the air. Research recommended to developer Norman Lear ("Nothing I asked for") that he be careful of the militancy of the young Michael and of the light-fingered habits of the older son, because "audiences would be afraid of the militancy, and black people would not like to see the character of the kid who was stealing," says Lear. He ignored the advice.

In Hollywood, the pervading sentiment is that when a show doesn't make the fall lineup, a poor test score is often to blame; and that network executives are prone to rely on test scores when they are dealing with an innovative, untried story format. Catch 22, add the Hollywood types sardonically, is that most innovative shows (All in the Family, Mary Tyler Moore, Batman) produce terrible tests. And in the Russian roulette world of TV, no network executive wants to be the guy who stakes his career on a daring new show that can't produce a high test score.

It would be unfair to imply that network executives are robots who execute programming decisions according to computer scores. There are hopeful signs of late that the networks are venturing into the realm of shows that defy low scores. Last year, for instance, ABC took a deep corporate breath and aired "That Certain Summer," the story of a homosexual father and his son. As a test, the 90-minute television film had been one of the all-time terribles; on the air, it became one of the season's great ratings successes.

All in the Family, as noted above, tested badly at both ABC and CBS but, despite low scores, made it to the air—thanks largely to the audacity of CBS president Robert Wood.

In the same vein, a high test score doesn't necessarily mean a pilot will be picked up by the network. Producer Sherwood Schwartz is still trying to figure out why a spin-off of The Brady Bunch—"Kelly's Kids," which grabbed an astonishingly high 86 at Preview House—wasn't used by ABC this year. "The Preview House number is quite important, but it doesn't sell a show," says Schwartz ruefully.

But in Hollywood, where it all happens, they still wish that testing business would go away. "We've grown up. TV has grown up," says MTM's Jim Brooks. "We're too big for that silliness any more." END

TV Teletype: Hollywood

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

After a long absence from TV acting, LEONARD NIMOY will be back on television next year, playing a virologist in ABC's TV-movie "Contaminated." Where's Leonard been all this time? "I've had a lot of activity in other areas," he told us. "This year I've done five theatrical productions, about 20 college lecture dates, had my second book published and made various other personal appearances. The material I'd seen coming down the road on TV just wasn't exciting enough to make me cancel those jobs." With all that varied activity, it's obvious that people no longer think of Leonard strictly as Mr. Spock, the fellow with pointed ears on Star Trek. "I don't have any problems with that," Nimoy said. "If I weren't getting any work I'd have to say the ears were a problem, but I'm getting work."

BARBARA EDEN and BARBARA FELDON are the stars of "Switch," an ABC TV-movie about two women who trade life styles. Miss Eden, a housewife, exchanges roles with Miss Feldon, a woman's-magazine editor . . . JACK BENNY, who's headlined two "farewell" shows in the past couple of seasons, will settle for a plain, ordinary special this time. Joining Jack on his Jan. 23 NBC program will be GREGORY and VERONIQUE PECK, and ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK.

DAVID McCALLUM, seldom visible on TV since The Man from U.N.C.L.E., plays the title role in "The Invisible Man," an NBC TV-movie that may become a series if enough people see it . . . ROBERT WAGNER, E.G. MARSHALL, LLOYD NOLAN, JAMES GREGORY and WILLIAM WINDOM star in "The Abduction of Saint Anne," an ABC TV-movie. The story involves a private detective "hired to kidnap a 17-year-old girl who is believed by the Vatican to be a living saint" . . . A new character will be added to CBS's The Waltons shortly after the first of the year. She's Corabeth Walton, a cousin to be played by RONNIE CLAIRE EDWARDS, and she'll marry Ike Godsey, the storekeeper (JOE CONLEY) . . . The Screen Actors Guild is up in arms over plans to film an ABC American Bicentennial series based on GORE VIDAL's novel "Burr" in England and Ireland. In a statement, the Guild said it "condemns the hypocrisy of going abroad to produce programs commemorating the 200th anniversary of American Independence."

"They received us great," said TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD, when we asked him about his trip to Russia, where he taped NBC's Jan. 8 special, "Tennessee Ernie's Nashville-Moscow Express." "We did 27 concerts in five cities. Started out in Yerevan, Armenia, then went to Tbilisi, then Baku on the Caspian Sea, then Leningrad, and from Leningrad to Moscow. They were running down the aisles carrying flowers. We went to schools and universities. We'd get on a bus and run out to the fields to see the people." Did the Russians dig the Nashville sound? "They didn't know about Nashville, but they heard about the music," old Ern said.
